

Insertion of Intraocular Lens

The left hand stabilizes and positions the IOL injector while the right injects.

The hand position here is similar to the injection of viscoelastic. Depending on the type of lens being inserted, a pushing or twisting action will be required of the right hand; this can involve significant force at times. Having the left hand firmly anchored again helps to stabilize.